Topic: Low-intensity quake shakes Chamba suburb in Himachal

Importance: Himachal HPAS Prelims and Mains

Importance for Prelims: Indian and World Geography- physical, social, economic geography of India and the world.

Importance for Mains Exam:

- PAPER-IV: GENERAL STUDIES-I: Unit III: Geographical Introduction to India, India as a unit of Geographical Study.

What is the news?

An earthquake measuring 3.10 on the Richter scale shook parts of Chamba district in Himachal Pradesh on Sunday evening.

- The epicenter of the quake was at Thanoli in Bhattiyat tehsil of the district, which is about 70 km from the district headquarters Chamba. According to the National Centre for Seismology officials, the quake was measured at a depth of 5 km from the surface.
- The tremors, felt around 6.40 pm, were felt by residents who rushed out of their houses in panic. There were no immediate reports of loss to life or property, said officials.
- Several low-intensity quakes have been experienced in neighboring Kangra and Mandi districts too in the recent past. On May 13, a 3.5-magnitude quake shook parts of Kangra district. People rushed out of their houses after they experienced the tremors.
- Most parts of Himachal Pradesh fall in a high seismic zone and mild quakes are a regular feature of the region. A major earthquake of 7.8 magnitude had hit the Kangra valley on April 4, 1905, claiming more than 20,000 lives. The Kangra region was then part of the undivided Punjab province.

About Earthquake:

- An earthquake is an intense shaking of Earth's surface. The shaking is caused by movements in Earth's outermost layer.

Earthquake Magnitude Scales:

- The severity of an earthquake is generally proportional to the amount of seismic energy it releases. Seismologists use a Magnitude scale to express this energy release. Here are the typical effects of earthquakes in various magnitude ranges.

Magnitude	Effects
Less than 3.5	Recorded on local seismographs, but generally not felt.
3.5 - 5.4	Often felt, but rarely cause damage.
Under 6.0	At most slight damage to well-designed buildings. Can cause major damage to poorly constructed buildings over small regions.
6.1 - 6.9	Can cause damage to poorly constructed buildings and other structures in areas up to about 100 kilometers across where people live.
7.0 - 7.9	"Major" earthquake. Can cause serious damage over larger areas.
8.0 - 8.9	"Great" earthquake. Can cause serious damage and loss of life in areas several hundred kilometers across.
9	Rare great earthquake. Can cause major damage over a large region over 1000 km across.

What instrument measures magnitude?

- The magnitude of an earthquake is measured by an instrument called seismographs. The scale of measure used to calculate the magnitude of an earthquake is called the Richter Scale.
