What's the latest?

- The National Remote Sensing Centre (NRSC) has identified all 12 districts in Himachal Pradesh as being prone to landslides, with socioeconomic factors playing a key role in the onset of the calamity.

Who made this available?

- The Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO) chairman S Somnath unveiled the Landslide Atlas of India on February 28 at the “National Meet on Disaster Risk Management – Trends & Technologies” in Hyderabad. The NRSC, an ISRO facility, manages data from aerial and satellite sources.
- The atlas includes a list of 147 districts in 17 states and two UTs that are vulnerable to landslides based on key socioeconomic parameters.
- Mandi (ranked 16), Hamirpur (ranked 25), Bilaspur (ranked 30), Chamba (ranked 32), Solan (ranked 37), Kinnaur (ranked 46), Kullu (ranked 57), Shimla (ranked 61), Kangra (ranked 62), Una (ranked 70), Sirmaur (ranked 88), and Lahaul and Spiti are the Himachal districts on the list (rank 126).

ISRO shared:

- Total population, number of households, roads, and livestock are examples of socioeconomic parameters (SEP). According to the NRSC's atlas, the Rudraprayag district in Uttarakhand has the highest landslide density in India, as well as the highest exposure to total population, working population, literacy, and number of houses.

- Contribution of each exposure element for the top 10 landslide-exposed districts is shown in bar diagram in the atlas. The chart showed population exposure and livestock exposure as the two major contributions for landslides. Two of these districts fall in Uttarakhand (Rudraprayag and Tehri Garhwal), two in Kashmir (Rajouri and Pulwama), four in Kerala (Thrissur, Palakkad, Malappuram and Kozhikode) and two in Sikkim (south and east district).
- Noting that landslides from remote steep slopes put people living downhill at risk, the atlas says slow-moving mountain slope identification is now possible thanks to time series measurements from space using microwave satellite data and the synthetic aperture radar (InSAR) technique, which can detect displacement at the millimetre level.
- The availability of open-source Sentinel-1 data has transformed research into landslide kinematics and predicting failure time. "However, identifying accelerating trends, demarcating the release area, and predicting flow path after failure initiation remain difficult," the atlas notes.
- The Northwest Himalayas account for 66.5% of landslides in India, followed by the Northeast Himalayas (18.8%) and the Western Ghats (14.7%), according to the landslide atlas.
