News: -A Harvard University study burning provides analysis of the stubble burning issue.

The study conducted:-

- A study carried out by the Department of Earth and planetary sciences of the Harvard University has revealed that due to the policy of delaying of paddy sowing, the farmers burn the stubble.
- They do so to prepare the field for the sowing of the Rabi wheat crop.
- The study has also found that the peak fire intensity of the post-monsoon burning season in Punjab has shifted by more than 2 weeks between 2003 and 2016, with a 40% increase in overall intensity of fires.
- Also, meteorological conditions in late autumn to winter season favour smog formation in Indo-Gangetic plains.

So, the level of pollution is likely to go up in the winter season.

Solutions recommended by the study:-

- Shifting towards less water-intensive crops and diversification of agriculture.
- Incorporating wheat seeds with rice residue can also remove the issue of burning.
